

Dear Study Abroad Students,

As you are aware, the status regarding the novel (new) coronavirus, known as COVID-19, continues to evolve. Over the past months, the U.S. and countries across the globe have taken unprecedented measures to restrict travel and limit the spread of the virus. In light of the ongoing uncertainty of the pandemic, the University of Delaware has decided to cancel all fall 2020 study abroad programs.

The University is taking this action now out of an abundance of caution for your safety and well-being. While we understand that this decision may disappoint you, our goal is to give you ample time to plan your housing, courses and finances for the fall semester. This is a difficult time for us all and for our partners around the world, but we hope that our decision today provides you and your family with some degree of certainty for the coming months.

Please note the following important information related to the cancellation:

1. Your application has been canceled in DIS' system. There is no need for you to take any action.
2. DIS will refund your $500 deposit via the same credit card by which it was paid. Please understand that DIS may be managing quite a few refunds at this time, and processing may take several weeks or longer.

If you wish to study abroad in spring 2021, you still have some time to submit an application, as the DIS program deadline is September 10 and the deadline for most UD spring programs is September 20. Remember to check online course listings, as courses offered in spring may differ somewhat from those offered in fall. Note that a final decision regarding the feasibility of spring 2021 programs may not be made for some time.

Please know that we share your disappointment in the cancellation of your program, and we hope that you will be able to study abroad at some point during your time at UD. You are a valued member of our community, and we are here to support you. For updates on the University's response to COVID-19, please visit the UD website. Should you have any questions, please contact our office at any time.

Sincerely,

Lisa Chieffo
Interim Director
