

COLLOQUIUM

“THE FAILURE OF U.S. TAX POLICY”

Co-Sponsored by the Legal Studies Program and the Department of Political Science, University of Delaware

Professor Sheldon D. Pollack
Department of Accounting
Department of Political Science
University of Delaware

Professor Pollack is the author of The Failure of U.S. Tax Policy, published by Penn State Press. He will discuss why U.S. tax policy is so complicated, partisan and erratic. He also will discuss proposals to replace the federal income tax with a flat tax, consumption tax, and national sales tax. Professor Pollack is a practicing tax lawyer and holds a law degree from the University of Pennsylvania School of Law, and a degree in political science from Cornell University.

All Faculty and Students are welcome!

Refreshments will be served
after the talk

Thursday March 20, 1997 4:00-5:15 p.m. Collins Room, Perkins Student Center

UPDATE

Vol. 16, No. 24

March 20, 1997

Tax policy topic of tonight's talk

Sheldon D. Pollack, accounting, will speak on "The Failure of U.S. Tax Policy," based on his recent book with the same title, from 4-5:15 this afternoon in the Collins Room of the Perkins Student Center.

He will discuss why U.S. tax policy is so complicated, partisan and erratic and also will talk about proposals to replace the federal income tax with a flat tax, consumption tax and national sales tax.

A practicing tax lawyer with a law degree from the University of Pennsylvania School of Law, Pollack has a doctorate in political science from Cornell University.

The colloquium, free and open to the public, is sponsored by the Legal Studies Program and the Department of Political Science and International Relations. Refreshments will be served after Pollock's talk.