

Schematic diagram of a standardized implantable receptacle that could be used to attach a prosthetic hand, arm, or leg. Such a device would require interfaces between various living tissues and materials of the engineered prosthesis, including bone--frame, peripheral nerve--wire, muscle--sensor, and skin--protective coating.